On strike

Teachers are going on strike this week. They have decided not to work for a day because they are protesting about low pay. This is nothing new. Teachers are always complaining! They complain about the condition of their classrooms and the school buildings; they complain about the students being lazy; they complain about parents not teaching their children to be polite; they complain that there are too many exams or that they have to do too much marking; they complain that holidays for teachers are too short and they complain that the terms are too long. They complain that they don't have computers. Then, when they get the computers, they complain about having to use them or that they don't work! Then they complain that people don't respect them and that people complain too much about teachers! All they ever seem to do is complain! Well, I think they should be happy that they are teachers in Britain because things are a lot better here than in some other places.
